

HIP INJECTION

Many times we see patients who may have hip pain that may or may not be coming from the spine. Obviously it is important to know if the pain is hip or spine in origin because different problems require different solutions. A reliable way to sort that out is to block or inject numbing medication in the suspected hip joint and see if the pain is turned off. This is done with a thin needle with xray